

The ogres look to their chest of jewelry,
to their camp and walls, and to the ~~fire~~ campfire beneath. They seem to ponder your comparisons words.

"Trinkets, buildings, tools, all things you reaped from these woods. ~~Sound~~ You weaken by thinking you can't find, take, or create it else where."

One ogre slowly stands up a lets loose a beastial roar. "RAAAAAH!" The trees shake and birds flee. ~~He towers~~ ~~He towers~~ He towers over the presumed Fi'ju spirit.

~~We look~~ "You call us weak? We return to the lands of dragon and men and fire and we are WEAK?" It grabs your companion by the girth and holds them in the air.

"I call you stronger. Stronger than you can be here. Stronger than ^{these} woods can contain."
The ogres' grip slowly loosens. "Fi'ju teach you."

The ogres drop to their knees and roar in unison, loud enough that you think the trees might shake loose from the ground.
Another ogre comes out the hut, roaring ~~at~~ too.
They gather their clubs and a charge out of the camp.
